

A REFUGEE'S JOURNEY TO RESILIENCE: Mirza Mohammad's Story with the KNH Project

A JOURNEY OF HARDSHIP AND HOPE

Mirza Mohammad, a 76-year-old father of ten, shares his poignant story of resilience and transformation. After being forcibly returned to Kunduz from Iran, he faced unimaginable challenges alongside his family. With limited resources, they struggled with daily necessities, rent, food, and winter essentials, often living without proper bedding and adequate clothing.

A LIFELINE FROM THE KNH PROJECT

In their time of desperate need, Mirza Mohammad's family was visited by a group from the NSDO office. They were informed that his name was on a refugee assistance list, bringing a sense of relief and hope. The non-food items provided through the KNH project became a turning point in their journey. The distribution included essential winter clothing and supplies such as children's sweaters, adult sweaters, Women's winter shawls, Men's winter wraps (Patoo), Shoes, Children's winter boots, Socks, Gloves, Caps, and Blankets. For Mirza Mohammad's family, receiving these items felt like a festival. The warmth from the blankets and the joy of having proper winter clothes alleviated the harsh realities they had been facing.

TRANSFORMING LIVES THROUGH COMPASSION

Mirza Mohammad reflects on the profound impact of the support:

"The blankets kept us warm at night, and the winter clothes brought immense happiness to my grandchildren. The support we received helped us endure the cold and the hardships."

The KNH project's efforts have been instrumental in reducing poverty and struggles faced by hundreds of refugees and displaced families like his.

A BEACON OF HOPE

The NSDO organization, through the KNH project, has not only provided material support but also restored dignity and hope. Mirza Mohammad expresses his heartfelt gratitude:

"I am deeply thankful to the NSDO Organization and the KNH project for this invaluable assistance. They have brought positive changes to our lives and have given us hope in the face of adversity."

"In the darkest moments, a small gesture of kindness brings light and hope to the heart." Mr. Mirza Mohammad
